

International Peace Institute

Donor Privacy Policy

The International Peace Institute (IPI) is committed to respecting the privacy of its donors.

IPI does not sell, lease, or trade to other organizations the personal information of its donors. This policy applies to all information received by IPI, both online and offline, on any platform (IPI websites and donation pages), as well as any electronic, written, or oral communication. Donor information is used only for the internal purposes of the International Peace Institute.

IPI collects and maintains the following donor information: name, affiliation, address, phone number, email address, and giving history. IPI also maintains donor files, containing records of correspondence and any useful documentation related to donor contributions. Credit card numbers are used only for donation or payment processing and are not retained for other purposes.

IPI's donation page offers donors the opportunity to opt out of being identified as a donor in IPI's annual report and other public documents. IPI regularly updates its mailing lists to include only donors who wish to receive mail. IPI immediately acts on requests to be removed from its mailing lists. IPI does not participate in sending donor mailings on behalf of other organizations.

If you have comments or questions about this donor privacy policy, or if you wish to be removed from IPI's mailing list, please email IPI's development officer, Allison White, at white@ipinst.org.